Flight Attendant: On every flight, there is always one passenger that stands out. It was an international flight, almost fully-booked, and there was a young girl I noticed immediately. She was the last to board, carrying a huge stuffed animal — it disturbed passengers on both sides of the aisle. She had a window seat near the front of her section. After the meal, she wanted to buy some perfume, and it took her ages to choose — other passengers were waiting. Then her entertainment system didn't work. I found her a new seat in the back of the section in front of her. Once she started to play the games, she was very noisy. Then she tried to use her cellular phone, and I had to warn her. I was getting tired of dealing with her. But she saved the day later. When everyone was trying to sleep, there was a baby crying at the front of her section. The parents tried everything, but nothing worked. Other passengers complained. Then the girl took her stuffed animal and played with the baby. He stopped crying and went to sleep. Everyone was relieved — some even thanked her. You never know which passenger is going to surprise you.

Passenger: My first international flight was really confusing. First we ate, then I bought perfume for my aunt. There were so many brands — it was difficult to decide which one was the best for her. The flight attendant wasn't very nice to me. He seemed to be in a hurry. The entertainment system at my seat didn't work, so I had to ask for help. He wasn't nice about that either. But, he moved me to another seat. Unfortunately, it was an aisle seat, but the games were fantastic. Later, I tried to email my friend, but the flight attendant stopped me. Then there was a baby crying and he wasn't nice with the parents either. I took the pink koala I brought for my nephew over to the baby and played with him. After a few minutes, he went to sleep. Before I knew it, the flight was over. It was strange — when I got off the plane, the flight attendant smiled at me warmly.
