

ベーシックセンター

英 語

語句挿入(1)

次の文章の ・ に入れるのに最も適当な語句を、それぞれ以下の①～④のうちから一つずつ選べ。

When English-speaking people talk about “hot” food, are they saying the food is spicy like curry, or are they talking about its temperature, as in “hot” coffee? These two different meanings of “hot” may seem confusing to Japanese students, but , the word is the right one for describing the way the body responds to spice and heat. A simple explanation would go something like this: when we eat or drink, the same nerves in the mouth react both to spicy chemicals in the food and to a rise in temperature. The English expression, , reflects this fact about the human body.

問1

- | | |
|-----------------------|-----------------------|
| ① in contrast to this | ② for this reason |
| ③ as a matter of fact | ④ in addition to this |

問2

- | | | | |
|-----------|-------------|----------------|---------------------|
| ① however | ② therefore | ③ for instance | ④ on the other hand |
|-----------|-------------|----------------|---------------------|